

LAST Spring's campaign of calumny was directed against us, in which it was said that, after this war, we intended to rush against the American continent and that we would first attempt to conquer Canada. This was the silliest of all the inventions directed against us. Equally silly was the report that we coveted the acquisition of Alaska.

tion of any American territory in Brazil or any other country in the Americas. We are fighting for our existence and for our future. We fight for Germany and not for space in any foreign land.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, Imperial German Chancellor, in Reichstag today.

APACHE INDIAN SCOUT, of type to be used by the United States in trailing Villa in the Mexican hills.

40 Killed in Mexico Battle.

Washington, April 5.—General Pershing's troops have again smashed Villa's forces. In this second battle of the campaign, the Villistas were routed, and they lost forty of their number dead on the field.

It is reported that the Americans suffered no casualties. Though the fighting did not bring the expedition any nearer to the heart of the country, it was a decisive blow to the power of the American army, and it was a blow to the power of the Mexican army, and it was a blow to the power of the Mexican army, and it was a blow to the power of the Mexican army.

WAR SENDS UP COST OF FOOD AT WHOLESALE

The prices of pie served to many Bostonians is one-tenth smaller than it used to be because there is fighting "somewhere in France," as the official dispatches are wont to say. There are five "outs" to a pie instead of four.

In other words, the European war has increased the wholesale cost of many foodstuffs—with occasional help from railroad embargoes—so that the restaurant margin of profit is slim. The restaurant man is between two choices on some dishes. He can raise the price and face loss of trade, or he can stand pat on his price list and suffer a loss on certain dishes.

"Yes; in some cases we have to. It's a case of five cents more on certain orders and three cents less on others, one way or the other. For instance, I dropped into a popular downtown lunch place the other day. They had a special of fried chicken and mustard pigs, and a pork chop to go into five pieces. That's the best pig chop I've ever had. But the price was a little more than it used to be, and the same old and the others used to be. So I said that this restaurant man is meeting the increased cost of food supplies. He serves smaller orders than I do, and he's got to make it work."

"Our own supplies are costing us much more, in many instances, than they did a year ago. We're not going to raise our prices, but we're going to have to make market reports of some of the industrial food stocks, like sugar for instance, and you can see that the price of sugar is up. The stocks mean high prices for the consumer. Sugar is selling on a basis of nearly seven cents a pound, and wheat is selling at thirty-three and a half cents a gallon before the war, is now forty-two. Salt for freezing for cream is selling at thirty cents a bag now, before the war was six cents a bag; now it is thirty. So now you pay ninety-five cents a bag for our ice cream salt that was six cents a bag before the war. That freight jump has come in the past three months.

"Because of our $4.50 a bushel, the flour down was started we got them for $2.90 to $2.75. The shipment of millions of cubs of beans to the war fronts has been cut off. The cost of sugar is a general tendency of foodstuffs is higher, outside of charges due to local causes, like the weather effects upon the lobster market.

This chain-restraintment has excited other increased costs particularly wages.

ICE GOING OUT OF MAINE LAKES EARLY

Augusta, Me., April 5.—The ice is getting very thin for this time of the year in the various lakes of the country and it is expected that, in spite of the late date to which the Weather Bureau, the ice will go out of the lakes considerably earlier than usual. At Marsanoook, Cubanoocette, Annabessanoook and Dexter pond there is less than a foot of ice, and this is for the most part covered with slush.

Mexican Developments Justify American's Previous Earnest Warning

WITH all possible earnestness we warned the administration the other day that this Mexican affair was serious business; that neither Carranza nor Obregon nor any other Mexican leader is to be trusted; and that stringing a few thousand American cavalry and infantry over the deserts of Chihuahua with thin lines of communication and without mobilizing troops to support them was to invite a Mexican uprising and war and possible disaster to our little army.

The administration answered by an unfounded and absolutely false statement, implying that the AMERICAN'S warning was part of a conspiracy to foment war between Mexico and this country for the benefit of rich property owners in Mexico.

The administration charged that part of this conspiracy was to circulate false reports of events in Mexico.

And the administration followed this up by widely circulating and having read in both Houses of Congress a FALSE REPORT that Villa had been desperately wounded, and had been hurried from the battlefield in a carriage and would be captured in a few days.

The notion of a wounded man or anybody else being driven in a carriage over the precipitous mulch trails of those wild mountains was enough of itself to move the contemptuous laughter of any man who knows western Chihuahua, and simply emphasizes Washington's total and childish ignorance of Mexican conditions.

Now come from Durango, from Sonora and from Sinaloa rumors of the very unrest we predicted. We hear daily that the Carranzista commanders and soldiery in Chihuahua are going over to Villa.

We know officially that Carranza's general, Obregon, is mobilizing not less than 30,000 soldiers in Chihuahua on the pretext that he fears an uprising engineered by Felix Diaz, when the news is not yet two weeks old that Diaz is heading a revolution in his native State of Oaxaca, far to the south.

We told you people and we told the administration the exact truth about the peril and risk of this extraordinarily and incredibly stupid movement of an inadequate and unsupported cavalry force into hostile Mexico.

No matter whether Villa is captured or not, the problem remains the same, for Carranza, Obregon, Diaz, Gavira and a dozen others are merely Villa by other names.

Precious time has been lost. But there is no use crying over that. We should do our best promptly to make up for it. The whole regular army should be on its way to Mexico. The National Guard should be immediately on its way to Mexico.

Two hundred thousand VOLUNTEERS should be immediately called to the training camps. The army should immediately seize the railroad points in Chihuahua and Durango. The fleet should immediately seize Vera Cruz, Tampico, Guaymas, Mazatlan, Acapulco and Tehuantepec.

If the job of pacifying Mexico is to be done at all, it ought to be done EFFECTIVELY FROM THE START.

To exhibit weakness and hesitation is to invite resistance and bloodshed.

To exhibit overwhelming strength is to prevent a national uprising and confine military operations to the occupation of strategic cities and railways and the subsequent extermination of anarchy and of guerrillas and bandits.

In any case, it is no job to be done with lectures, copybook maxims, rewards of merit, good conduct cards and other paraphernalia of the schoolmaster.

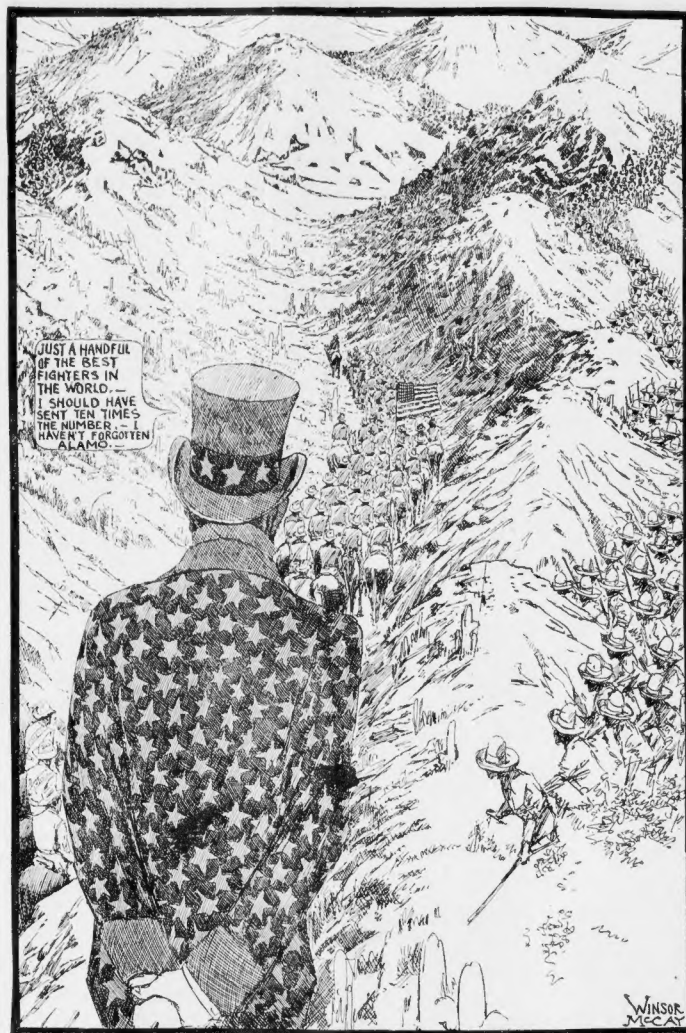

It is a man's job, to be done with blood and iron and statesmanlike decision, promptness and force.

We should either intervene and occupy and pacify and rehabilitate Mexico upon a scale of dignity, power and military strength becoming a great nation, or we should not intervene at all.

For our own sake and for Mexico's sake let us cease to be ridiculous.

Quick Decision and Self-Confidence Two Great Assets to Man

Ability to Make Up Mind Promptly and Then to Act Without Delay Has Brought Success to Many. Lack of Belief in Self Serious Stumbling Block

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ONE ship sails east and another sails west. With the very same winds that blow. 'Tis the set of the sails, and not the gales, That tell them the way to go. Like the winds of the sea are the ways of fate. As we voyage along thro' life, 'Tis the set of the soul that decides its goal, And not the calm or the strife.

"ABOUT a year ago I was compelled to give up a profession I had been training for all my life—or give up my life. I preferred the former. I took a rest, an opportunity presented itself in the country town where I was. I learned a little something about the mail order business. I determined to again visit New York and secure a better position. I came on knowing nobody and with no visible opportunity in sight. I visited two places, one the leading monthly magazine of its class in the country.

"In the three interviews I had with the vice-president of the concern I changed his ideas so completely that from a 'don't want' attitude he not only thanked me for telling him where his magazine was weak, but I had brought him around to a 'must-have-a-man-to-do-what-you-say' feeling, and the only reason I am not on that publication today is, because while he had been making up his mind I had accepted a position as correspondent with one of the largest concerns of the sort in the city. I visited two places. I could have secured two good positions. I am a puny, sickly looking, under-sized individual at that. I was so earnest they had to believe me. Moral: If you don't find an opportunity, make one. H. A. L."

Men Too Prone to Blame Fate When Fault Is in Selves

That is a good letter, and I am glad to give it publicity. We are so ready to blame Fate for our misfortunes and our failures, when a little careful analysis of our own selves and methods would explain many of them.

The very first thing to cultivate after fortune of purpose and a belief in your own divine inheritance is decision.

Make up your mind promptly what you will do in small matters. If it is a question of going out or staying in, or writing or reading a book, or making a call or taking a walk, decide it, and then act on your decision. Do not shilly-shally and waste your mental energies in indecision or wait to consult other people regarding it.

Form the habit of choosing a course of action for yourself, and if you find on going out that it would have been wiser to remain at home, take the experience as a lesson on the next occasion and have no time in regrets or doubts of yourself.

Men Unable to Decide Between Art and Law Sure to Fail.

Believe in yourself. Remember you have just as good a right to walk in God's avenues of happiness and success and usefulness as anyone else. You are just as near the throne as any mortal who ever lived, or who lives today.

No matter how humble your station you are an important part of the universe, or you would not be here.

Keep that always in mind. Then expect good influences to guide you. Think of yourself as elected by a holy line, over which nothing but good can pass. Be so earnest. Be so in earnest that, as my correspondent says, people must believe in you.

A young man recently wrote me that he loved art and liked law; he asked me to decide for him whether he should become an artist or a lawyer. He feared whichever choice he made he would regret the idea abandoned. I might as well advise a weaver which way to turn as such a man. His own mind is laying the foundation of failure.

Learn to choose your own course in life. Then persevere in it with such industry that nothing can move you. Learn how to hold your sails and any wind that blows will take you into port.

Old John Jones

By William F. Kirk

OLD JOHN JONES, aged sixty-four, kept the books in Jenkins' store. And, when work was not the rule, Had a class in Sunday school. Yes, he did.

Old John Jones—I see him now With his scowling, milrless brow— Used to tell us eager boys To beware of earthly joys; Pomp and vanity and such Mustn't get us in their clutch. "When you're men," he used to say, "Walk the straight and narrow way. Never flirt with pretty girls, Never pat their golden curls. Never drink and cover smoke; Never tell a naughty joke. Never loaf around with drones, He like me!" said old John Jones.

One fine day an awful roar Echoed out of Jenkins' store. Then we heard a grim report: "Twenty thousand dollars short!" And we learned the following day Old John Jones had gone away; And, so far as I can learn, Old John Jones did not return. Did he make the shortage good As a righteous deacon should? Did he send the firm a check To avert the total wreck? No. He hurried on his way, Going nearer North each day, Going nearer to the Pole— Good old soul!

Motherhood and Character

By Lyman P. Powell

President of Hobart College

AMONG the books I have perused on the reading public is "Heavenly Hierarchy." It was written to do honor to a few free spirits of the last two centuries who had to pay the usual price of freedom.

No one of them knew anything worth while about women. Who does? Two were heathens. One was a hen-pecked saint. The other who married had families. They thought children were from God. Modern theories of birth rates and birth control swim beyond their furthest ken.

Jonathan Edwards is by many regarded as the highest speculative genius of the eighteenth century. He worshipped his wife, and his well-known rhapsody about her deserves place with Dante's reference to Beatrice. He left everything to her. She bore him ten children, and there is general agreement that the Edwards family is the most remarkable in the history of our country.

The American family type persisted until lately. The mother at least taught the children what they ought to know. She started them right. In most cases the father was not too preoccupied with making a new motherhood may possibly bring that intimate companionship between mother and child which will leave attention often not now given by either parent to character building. The world may have to start anew. This is intimation, not prediction.

The Woman Movement—in which, in general, I believe—has its perils as well as its aid for child character.

The question of the higher education of women was, in part, settled when the first woman's college at Elmira was opened. Women from that day were bound to have more freedom. And they have it. The

A Disguised Blessing

Perhaps the great war may be a blessing. Its disguise. National pressure is already compelling more thought for child production. The
